Marching into the Dobbs Era

Last month, I had the privilege of speaking at the first March for Life in this new Dobbs era. This March was unlike any other. We said goodbye to one chapter of American history and marched into a new one.

Standing in front of thousands of Americans all bundled in coats and scarves, I was reminded of the chilly December day just a year earlier when we stood in front of the U.S. Supreme Court to tell the justices and the world that we can both empower women and promote life. The Justices granted us this opportunity, and now the task falls to us.

It is time to update our laws to better empower women and their families and promote respect for the dignity of all life. This is a tall task, but we have overcome greater challenges. Together, let's march into this new chapter with the same determination and dedication that brought us to this new day, and with the same respect and compassion we have always shown women and their children.

Attorney General Lynn Fitch: Affirming the Dignity and Worth of All Lives
WORLD Magazine
Monday, Jan. 30, 2023

"For nearly 50 years, people from all across the United States have marched in the streets of D.C., driven by hope and resolve that one day the egregiously wrong, deadly, and unworkable Roe v Wade would be overturned. Last week, thousands of Americans marched again for the first time since the Court overturned Roe. Contrary to what many reported, this year's March for Life was not a victory lap. Quite the opposite."

"As we marched, we said goodbye to one chapter of American history, and we started a new one. This new chapter comes replete with our respect for the dignity of all life and is one that underscores our commitment to the lives of all children and also to the women who face pregnancy, even in difficult circumstances. With the task now falling to us, we must rise to this challenge with the very same energy we mustered for five decades to bring us to this new era. Roe has been overturned, and now the hard work just gets harder."

ATTORNEY GENERAL LYNN FITCH IN THE NEWS

Dr. James Dobson's FamilyTalk: U.S. Senator Marsha Blackburn on The Big Issues Currently Affecting the Family

"It's something that I was watching very closely and I was anticipating what would happen. I am a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and I felt a really close personal tug on that one because Lynn Fitch, who's the amazing attorney general in Mississippi and a pro-life conservative female and a mother and a grandmother, is the architect of that case," said Marsha Blackburn. "She's the one that really shepherded this. And you know, Tim, it was so interesting to me how so many people, the many of the groups didn't give her the credit or thought the case would never go anywhere, and then she championed on and really pushed forward and for the court to have heard the case and then for the court to render that decision."

Nebraska Family Alliance: A Conversation With Mississippi Attorney General Lynn Fitch

"Because of Attorney General Fitch's bold courage, we are living in a post-Roe America, and the pro-life movement is working on every level to promote life and empower women. NFA was honored to welcome Attorney General Fitch to Nebraska for a special event in January with government officials, faith leaders, and pregnancy help organizations to inspire and encourage them as they advance a culture of life in Nebraska."
