A Message from Mississippi Attorney General Lynn Fitch

The fight against human trafficking asks something of each of us. On February 6, 2026, you will have an opportunity to stand with victims of human trafficking and be part of the solution. My office is hosting a free, one-day summit to educate and empower one another in the fight to end human trafficking. We will offer informative panels on how to identify and report trafficking, give trafficking survivors an opportunity to share their stories, connect attendees with organizations that need volunteer help, and engage in a service project to offer victims hope. You can visit my website HERE to learn more and sign up for this free event.

Suitcase Bundling for Foster Children in Mississippi

Last week, I was honored to welcome members of the Trump administration and Focus on the Family here in Mississippi for a service project packing 1,350 suitcases for children in foster care. Over 150 volunteers from State agencies participated by filling rolling suitcases with stuffed animals, age-appropriate Bibles, and handwritten notes of encouragement. The suitcases and items packed inside were donated by Focus on the Family through their Wait No More Suitcase Bundle Program.

Children in foster care face unique challenges, often entering the system with very few personal belongings and a great deal of uncertainty. By providing them with something they can truly call their own, we are offering more than a tangible item; we are offering a sense of stability and dignity. Every child deserves to feel valued and secure, and I am grateful to our volunteers and agency partners who work tirelessly to ensure these children know they are seen and cherished.
